Indipendent Publishing Announcement

This is our biggest announcement of the year: we're starting to publish independently!

In a couple of weeks, give or take a few days, we'll be posting our next clothing release through a few new channels: Patreon, 3dShards, FlippedNormals, ArtStation and Renderhub.

Some details are still being ironed out, but this is the current plan.

This decision was a few years in the making and during the summer the stars aligned, so to speak.

We're quite excited and eager to start this new adventure as we feel we have the right tools at our disposal for this to happen.

This also means that our own website and the newsletter will be the hub of everything we'll do (including some non-3d stuff).

News will always be posted on our blog and website first and then spread through our newsletter and all our other channels.

Website Update

To reflect all these changes we just updated our main page: it now includes all the new store links as well as a news section. We also added two new pages: Stores and Freestuff.

Patreon official launch

We opened our Patreon page some time back, when we initially took the decision to start indie publishing.

Today marks its official launch through the release of three freebies: the Agate Plunge Tops.

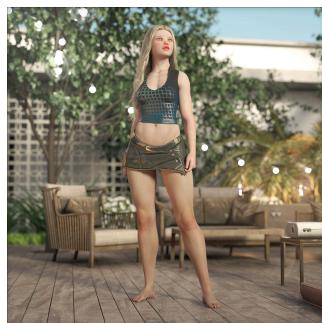

These can be acquired through a free membership. More info about our Patreon plans can be found here: <https://www.patreon.com/posts/taking-next-step-130774176>
